When you find yourself thinking that a child is being Manipulative, Unmotivated, Attention Seeking, Defiant, etc., try viewing the child instead as having a relative gap in their Capacities, Skills, and/or Understanding that makes them unable to meet a challenge they’ve experienced in the learning environment. In dialogue with the child and the learning community, consider what you can do to help develop the child’s Capacities, Skills, and/or Understanding.

Children do well if they can.

Prepared by Clough 2020; Informed by the Collaborative Proactive Solutions model (Greene 2008) in the service of Peace Literacy (peaceliteracy.org)